Michael Day, State Representative of the 31st Middlesex District in Massachusetts

In his first State of the Union Address, President John F. Kennedy said, “Let the public service be a proud and lively career.” Those words capture the honor and responsibility I feel in serving as the Massachusetts State Representative for the 31st District and as the Chair of the Joint Committee on the Judiciary.

As the sixth of seven children Boston, I was incredibly and a community that challenge I embraced. encouraging me to pursue risks in different occupations, had the support of an Each success further back to those who made those those following me had the same growing up in a suburb north of fortunate to be part of a family supported me in every Whether that meant higher education or to take I was always confident that I incredibly caring community. reinforced my obligation to give successes possible, to ensure that opportunities to succeed.

I have spent my professional career advocating for people, first as an attorney and now as a State Representative. My current position allows me to work each day to move our society forward, to safeguard the common good and to help others.

There is no “typical day” in this role, and there is no end to the opportunities to help someone every day, whether that means something as simple as helping an individual navigate bureaucratic challenges or enacting policy changes that will impact every corner of the Commonwealth and beyond. As Chair of the Joint Committee on the Judiciary, I oversee the busiest committee in the legislature, charged with oversight over all manner of civil rights, criminal justice and civil liberties issues, among others. In addition to this work, the COVID-19 pandemic found me and my office often serving as the first point of contact for individuals, companies, first responders, hospitals and schools. This work has been as rewarding as it has been challenging, and this public health emergency has afforded me the privilege of working intimately with my constituents.

Whether receiving testimony on upwards of 800 legislative proposals, modernizing our laws or helping a family secure housing, my job is as lively as any I can imagine. The pride I feel every day in representing my district and my state reminds me that President Kennedy’s edict has indeed been met.

State Representative Michael Day, proudly serves as State Representative of the 31st Middlesex District in Massachusetts, consisting of the towns of Stoneham and Winchester.
